It has been demonstrated by experiment which have been made in Denmark and Germany

In this country the foot-andmouth disease has been so rare that there are few recorded cases of its transmission to human beings. In 1902 a few cases were reported in New England and in were found in the mouths of children, which were believed to have been caused by contaminated milk. In both of these outed as soon as the disease was found among the cattle. As long confined by rigid quarantine to certain specified areas the danger from this source is very small. over country and become as general as it has been at various times in large areas in Europe, the problem would become more serious. Under any cirsumstaces however, pasteurization would be an efficient remedy. Where pasteurization is not possible and where there is any reason to suspect that the disease may exist might be advisable.

Cows affected with the malignant form of the disease lose practically all of their milk. In mild cases, however, the decrease may be from one-third to onehalf of the usual yield. The appearance of the milk also changes coagulated fibrin and blood, so that a considerable sediment forms, while the cream is thin and of a dirty color. These changes, however, occur only when the disease is in an advanced stage, and, as a matter of fact the disease is not permitted to pass into au advanced stage, as any stricken animal is at once slaughtered.

Man who come in contact with diseased animals may also befected. Where it is very prevalent among animals, some authorities believe that it is fairly general among human beings, but that the disturbances it causes are usually so slight that they are not brought to the attention of the family physican. There is, however, a very good reason for everyone giving the diseased animals as wide a berth as possible, namely, that otherwise they may easily carry the disease to perfectly healthy herds.
